

Gilt vs. Guilt

Gilt and guilt are homophones, words having the same pronunciation but different meanings, origins, or spelling, that are easily confused by writers. Another reason that causes writers to interchange them is that spellcheck and autocorrect functions would not detect any error since both words can be found in the dictionary. This post will help you determine the differences between the two terms and avoid the confusion in the future.

The word gilt can be used as a noun referring to “gold leaf or gold paint applied in a thin layer to a surface.”
