

Present Perfect vs. Present Perfect Continuous

Fill in the blanks with a present perfect or present perfect continuous tense.

1. I on this project for six months now.

have worked

have been working

Either could be used here

2. She to Japan.

has gone

has been going

Either could be used here

3. I mopping the floors.
What should I do now?

Present Perfect vs. Present Perfect Continuous

have finished

have been finishing

Either could be used here

4. We anything from them yet.

have not heard

have not been hearing

Either could be used here

5. They together for six years now.

have lived

have been living

Present Perfect vs. Present Perfect Continuous

Either could be used here

6. I the shipment.

have received

have been receiving

Either could be used here

7. She for a job since she left college.

has looked

has been looking

Either could be used here

8. At last, she a good

Present Perfect vs. Present Perfect Continuous

job.

has found

has been finding

Either could be used here

9. Alan his leg.

has broken

has been breaking

Either could be used here

10. You still that job.

have not finished

have not been finishing

Present Perfect vs. Present Perfect Continuous

Either could be used here

11. 'You look hot.' 'Yes, I
.....'

have run

have been running

Either could be used here

12. You me any help.

have never offered

have been never offering

Either could be used here

Present Perfect vs. Present Perfect Continuous

Answers

I have been working on this project for six months now.

She has gone to Japan.

I have finished mopping the floors. What should I do now?

We have not heard anything from them yet.

They have been living together for six years now.

I have received the shipment.

She has been looking for a job since she left college.

At last, she has found a good job.

Alan has broken his leg.

You still have not finished that job.

'You look hot.' 'Yes, I have been running.'

You have never offered me any help.